CRIME IN ERLEN TO BE EXTIRPATED, II POSSIBLE, BY IMPERIAL DECREE.

M. RIBOT'S SPECH ON ENGLAND IN EGYPT-THE KING OF RUMANIA AT BERLIN -RUMORS ABUT A ROYAL MARRIAGE.

Copyright: 189 : By The Tribune Association. Landor, Oct. 31-The rescript of the German Emperor to his Ministry of State touching crime in Berlin is a document which Europe has received with mixel feelings. Even in Germany, where freedom of comment on Imperial opinions can only practised at the peril of imprisonment, the press to criticise this performance. cooled the enthusiasm of his English admirers, nany in number. It has delighted his enemies. It once more resents him to those who are neither nemies nor friends, but observers, as a ruler reled by his mad impulses. He has probably convictions, o which the strongest is the conviction of his own infallibility. He cannot under-stand how it bould be possible for a sovereign who has good intentions and almost absolute do anything but good to his subjects and the rest of rankind. But I suppose no manifeste ever saw be light more devoid of all trace of real knowledge of the business of governing.

This young Enperor, with his divine right, has not begun to unerstand what can be done and what cannot be one in this world, or that what wants done shuld not, as it were, do itself, and that instantly. Edicts and decrees, sweeping enough to shale the foundations of the German Empire, are sent of by telegraph. He holds no council, takes no advice, asks nothing of experience. He orders he Minister of Justice to take "instant measures" to purge Berlin from certain crimes. Having dose that, he feels it his duty to draw the attention of his whole Cabinet to the subject, and to request the Cabinet to lay before him definite proposal for dealing with a matter already dealt with it this summary fashion. It occurs to him that thre are already laws against crime, and that it might be worth while to try the efficacy of some of them "for the extirpation of these degraded wreches." Nothing less than extirpation will do. The police must proceed against this "hideou class" without mercy. So must the public prosecutor. So must the courts. German courts of justice have heretofore, not always, but often and in very difficult circumstances, shown themselves independent of executive "There are judges in Berlin" is a famous saying. German jidges of the higher class ere perhaps the only officials in the Empire who have maintained this honorable They are now to surrenpendence. "The courts," cries the Emperor, "must punish even first ofences with the highest possible penalty." There is one Government in Europe more autocratic than the German, but it may be doubted whether even the Czar of Russia would issue a public edict telling Russian judges that they "must" do this or that. The edict would be issued privately. The decencies of despotism are respected in Russia, if not in Ger-

When the German bench has bowed to this Imperial decree, when it has forfeited its independence and sunk into servility, it may be assured of its master's gracious protection. The bench will under all circumstances be upheld against the attacks of the defence, the accused, or the public." But one mouth in Germany is to open; all the rest are to be shut. The accused are to be denied counsel. Any advocate wicked enough to defend an accused person whom the Emperor wishes to " will do it at his peril. "Measures are to be taken," says this wise, just and moderate ruler "to deal with those advocates who blink to their duty of helping to elicit the truth, and make it their business to bring about the triumph of wrong by frivolous opposition." It is for the Emperor to determine what is wrong and what opposition is frivolous, or for the courts acting under his orders, and woe to any advocate who shall presume to insist on the legal rights of one " hideous classes."

That is his meaning; but half autocrat and wholly arbitrary as the Emperor is, there is still in Germany such a thing as law. A German journalist has been found bold enough to point out that the courts of justice in Prussia are answerable to no higher authority than their own These crude views of the well-meaning young man, who probably thought about the matter for rescript, will have no effect on the administration of justice. The decree is countersigned by no ister, and is of no legal validity whatever.

M. Ribot has made a speech on Egypt and the English occupation of Egypt as sensible, perhaps, as circumstances permit the French Minister of Foreign Affairs to make. If circumstances permitted him to make none, that would be the most sensible of all: but in that case, he would be exposed to all kinds of taunts, which he now anticipates. French susceptibilities about Egypt are reinforced in the French press and elsewhere with financial expectations. No Cabinet dure disregard both. M. Ripot asks France to note with pride that she is still strong enough to prevent useful reform in Egypt, and he cites a recent instance in The claim is one which England and the rest of Europe know to be well founded.

His reference to England and to the pertinacious effort of France to quarrel with England about Egypt, is novel and peculiar. "I hope," says M. Ribot, "that the English public will take account of our obligation to remind the Government of their country of the engagements entered into by it." In that sentence you may hear an echo of Mr. Gladstone's Newcastle speech. The Government of France appeals from the Government of England to that English public opinion which Mr. Gladstone has done his best to represent as opposed, on a grave international question, to its own Government. But M. Ribot has not followed the later stages of that interesting controversy which took its start from Newcastle. He seems unaware that Mr. Gladstone has been completely, or almost completely, reputated, even by his own followers. Even Mr. Morley, who probably tomes nearer agreeing with him than any other of his colleagues, has repudiated both Mr. Glad-stene and himself. He spoke not long ago of England as "vulnerable" in Egypt, and of her persistent occupation as involving great disadvantages, but he meant nothing. He certainly did not mean, he declared at Manchester on Monday, he was in favor of handing over that country either to barbarism or to France. French could hardly be blamed if they protested against Prance being bracketed with barbarism. That however, is but a phrase, and not every Frenchman knows how important the author of What is really important, and what M. Ribot and his colleagues will do well to understand, is that the policy of scuttling out of Egypt finds no serious support in this country. Mr. Gladstone is for it, but the Gladstonian party is against it, and when Mr. Gladstone comes into power his own Foreign Minister will on this Point-yes, and on some other points of foreign policy, too-be his most determined opponent. He will be more than his opponent. He would be master's master, for Lord Rosebery's next tenure of the Foreign Office will be on the same as his last, namely, that he is to have a If anything be known in politics, that

The visit of the King of Rumania to the German Emperor at Berlin has some political significance. He is a Hohenzollern, a sort of sentinel set beyond Germany's frontiers to watch over German interests in Southeastern Europe. German interests include in that part of the world Austrian, as well as Prussian, and once more does the Teinla Allian the Triple Alliance appear menacing to Russia, shall Russia herself become a menace to Peace. The King was received by the Emperor tion. His visit was marked by every circumstance which could convey a civil hint to the Czar that the relations between the King and the Emperor were cordial, and that Russia will do well to keep her hands off Rumania.

Whether the heir presumptive to the throne of Rumanis is betrothed to the eldest daughter of the Duke of Edinburgh seems uncertain. The engagement is affirmed and denied with equal positiveness. Should it occur, the political interest of it is not to be sought primarily in the fact that Princess Mary is a granddaughter of the Queen of England, but in her German and Russian kinship. G! W. S.

Governor Hill still stands as the embodiment of peanut politics. His refusal to "recognize" Governor Bulkeley, of Connecticut, even at this ate day, is a colossal joke. Everybody remembers that a few months ago the de facto Governor of New-York called the de facto Governor of Connecticut a "usurper" and an "intruder," if not a pretender; yet nobody but a peanut politician would wish to keep such a thing up.

A FORTUNATE OPERA SINGER,

MISS BERTHA RICCI UNEXPECTEDLY INHERITS

FOUR HOUSES. An unexpected piece of good fortune has just befallen Miss Bertha Ricci, who is well known here and has been much admired as a comic opera singer. She learned last week that she had inherited four houses in West Seventy-hinth-st, from General Frederick Dubois of Wilmington, Del. The will that left the propert to Miss Ricci said that it was "as a kind of recompens for services rendered to one of mine in time of trouble."
This refers to the fact that Miss Ricci some years ago showed great kindness and attention to a daughter of General Dubeis who was sick and finally died in Paris Both were studying music and were fellow-pupils. a solution to an old mystery. For a long time, when-ever Miss Ricci sang in New-York, she received frequent bouquets and baskets of flowers with jewels attached to them, and she could never find out who sent them. It is now assumed that General Dubois must have been

Later she sang for some time A year ago she was in the Minnie Palmer Comic Opera Company, which had a disastrons pearance in New-York was at the Standard Theatre "Ship Ahoy." Since then she has sung in the West in a comic opera with music by Sylvain and words by the Paultons, which for some reason or other was a failure. Sylvain is now composing an opera especially for her, of which she has great hopes. It is called "Kismet," and will probably be heard early next

INSULTING COUNTY CLERK GIEGERICH.

An exciting scene took place in the County Clerk's lerk dismissed Edward J. Hare a searcher for absence without leave. Harre's salary was $2,000 a year. His superior found that he had been absent from his desk for eleven days. His excuse was that he was electioneering for the Tammany ticket. When he came to approve the pay-rolls for October, ex-Judge Giegerich odered that the eleven days' pay be deducted from Hare's salary for the month. Hare "kicked," and became so insolent and threatening in his manner that the County Clerk summarily removed him. Hare exhibited uncontrollable indignation. Shaking his fist under Mr. Giegerich's nose he shouted:

"I'm not afraid of you or those behind you. I'll nake you repent this before I've done with you." Mr. Hare is a Tammany Hali politician of the XIVth sembly District, and his name appears upon the roll of patriots composing the Tammany Hall General Committee of the XIVth. After he had failed to appear for duty for four days Mr. Glegerich found him in a liquor-shop. His explanation was that he was ena figure-stop. His expandation was that he was en-gaged in campaign work in the cause of Flower and sheehan. The County Clerk was skeptical, and when seven more days of absence rolled away fook the action stated. Hare expects ex-Register Rellly, Tam-many leader of the XIVth District, to right his wrongs.

" ALABAMA" IN THE SOUTH

"Alabama," which returns to New-York at Palmer's Theatre to-morrow night, seems to have made a most decided impression in the course of its recent tour in the South. Mr. Palmer said of it yesterday: "It is really astonishing to notice the peculiar character it has taken on in the South. It is variously referred to as 'the evangel of peace,' 'a bealer of wounds' and a prejudice-healing mission.' In attempting to develop the American drama I do not believe that any greater encouragement could be found than the approbation that has come from both sections of the puntry as a tribute to the portraiture of Southern life that the play represents. When the South through its press declares that the play has put the South under a debt of gratitude it means something more than the praise of a drama; it means the avowed and open welcoming of a reconciliation."

TO REOPEN THE METROPOLITAN MUSEUM.

A NEW-JERSEY PHYSICIAN MISSING.

Hightstown, N. J., Oct. 31 .- There is considerable excitement in Perineville, about seven miles from here, over the disappearance of Dr. H. T. McMillan, a wellchown physician of that place. About 9 o'clock last night Dr. McMillan's horse came home alone, without the buggy. The reins had the appearance of having been cut, and the harness was disarranged. Mrs. Mc-Millan immediately informed the neighbors, and a searching party with lanterns started out to look for Dr. McMillan. The search was kept up all night, and this morning the doctor's hat was found near the railbuch state and ceremony and honor, and to that best of all German spectacles, a determined whether Dr. McMillan met with an accident or with foul play.

Policeman John J. Barnes, of the Charles-st. squad, accidentally shot himself and another man in the weighing office of the Knickerbocker Ice Company, at Eleventh-st, and Thirteenth ave., yesterday afternoon James Nichols, the man whom Barnes shot, was beleved to be dying in St. Vincent's Hospital last evening, and a coroner was called to the hospital to take his ante-mortem statement. Nichols was the ice company's agent at the weighing office, and was employed in paying off a number of laborers there when he was shot at 4 p. m. Barnes had been on post near the office earlier in the afternoon, and he went inside to help keep the men in line as they were being paid off. He talked to the men and exhibited a new, selfself-acting revolver which he carried with him was holding the weapon in both hands, the barrel being clasped by the fingers of his left hand as he worked the hammer and trigger with the thumb and forefinger of his right hand. As the weapon was loaded, Barnes was careless in holding the muzzle pointed toward Suddenly the hammer slipped from the policeman's thumb and the revolver was discharged. The bullet tore a furrow through the palm of Barnes's left had and entered Nichols's abdomen near the hip. Barnes dropped the revolver with a cry of pain as Nichols sank fainting on the floor. The men who were in the office raised Nichols up and saw that he was hurt sectously. One of them ran to call an ambulance from 8t. Vincent's Hospital. Barnes went to the hospital with Nichols and was permitted to go to his home at No. 291 West Fourth-st., after his hand had been bandaged. The surgeons at the hospital, after examining the wound in Nichols's abdomen, said it probably would prove fatal. Nichols was sinking fast last evening. He was lifty-seven years old and had a family living at No. 21 Lercy-st. tore a furrow through the palm of Barnes's left had

REPORT ON THE CROTON WATER.

IT IS TOO HARD ON TAMMANY TO BE PUBLISHED AT PRESENT.

The report by Drs. Martin and Beebe, chemists of the Health Department, telling of the unisances which they recently discovered in the Croton water-cled, might have been ready for the perusal of the Health Board two or three weeks ago if President Wilson and Commissioner Bryant had been willing to let the public know what was contained in the report. As both are Democrats, and as Mr. Wilson is considered a faithful Tammany man, although he had no influence in the Wigwam before he was placed in the Health Board by Mayor Grant, there probably is some political 1 ason for keeping the discoveries of the chemists from the public knowledge until after the election.

The Health Board had no meeting last week and
Mr. Wilson said the next meeting probably would be called for Wednesday, November 4. The chemists are under strict orders not to tell anything about the re port, which is a voluminous document and contains many results of analysis that would be tiresome read-It was ascertained yesterday that the report dealt with 1,045 specific instances of water contamination in the Croton district and that many of the nuisances had been found to be the results of carelessness or inefficiency displayed by the employes of the Department of Public Works, under the control of Tammany, who live in the district. Those employes are puld to look after the reservoirs in the district, and some of them have been guilty of helping to pollute the water. It was found, for instance, that the drains from the house of an engineer on property belonging to the city were connected directly with the Croton. When the Health Board reads the report of the chemists and suggests a remedy for the contamination of the water supply, the public will be assured that a Republican Legislature and a Republican Governor will take proper steps to stop the sources of pollution.

A CHINESE GOVERNOR.

A CHINESE GOVERNOR.

Tshang Yao, the Governor of the Province of Shantung, who died recently, was one of the highest dignisaries of the Celestial Empire. He had a highly adventurous career. Here in lowly position, he was obliged to fice in his youth on account of having murdered the tormentor of an old man. He became a robber and soon stood at the head of all the brigmins who made the province of Hunan unsafe. When, during the rebellion, the chief town of the province was threatened, the Governor issued a proclamation in which he promised the hand of his daughter to the man who would save the town from the enemy. At the head of 500 bandita, Ishang beat off the attack of the rebels, and led home on the next day, as a reward for his bravery, the almond-eyed beauty. Then he made rapid progress. He was not able to read or write, but was of great integrity, and died poor as he was born. He was called by his people, on account of his charity, Tshang, "the blue sky." It is said, however, that he was not always just toward Europeans, and especially the missionaries.

OPENING OF NIGHT CLASSES POSTPONED. Contrary to expectation, the night classes of Cooper Union will not begin to-morrow night. The following circular was sent out by the president, Edward Cooper, yesterday; "The trustees of the Cooper Union regret to say that the opening of the night classes in art is unavoidably postponed until January 4, 1892, but that the repairs will undoubtedly be completed and the class-rooms ready for occupancy on that date."

The story of Whittington as a poor boy with his cat, and afterward thrice Lord Mayor of London, is an old and well-known one. As a reminder of it one has only to go to Sypher & Co.'s and see the wonderful chime clock in carved oak which tells his history. The door has a life-size figure of Whittington and his cat listening to the chimes as he thinks he hears them say: "Turn back, turn back, Whittington, thrice Lord Mayor of London." A large medallion representing him as Lord Mayor is on the base. It chimes the Whittington chimes on the hours, quarters and haves. The following inscription is on the inside of the door over a landscape scription is on the inside of the door over a landscape representing the lad foot-sore and weary at the ten-mile shope to London, listening to the chimes: "Sir Richard Whittington, Lord Mayor of London, 1398, Richard II; 1406, Henry IV; 1419, Henry V." New-York, October 24, 1881.

TO THE VOTERS OF THE 7TH ASSEMBLY DISTRICT:

The undersigned take pleasure in saying that they have known Mr. Jenkins Van Schaick for many years and business man of capacity and integrity. They believe that if elected to represent the Seventh Assembly District in the Legislature of the State he will be found to be everything that is desirable. He is a large property owner, and a resident in the District since 1868.

He served in the Reform Poard of Aldermen of this city in 1871, 1872 and 1873. He was for many years one of the New-York Commissioners for building the Brocklyn Beldge.
